HEALTH PROMOTION CENTER Grand Opening

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 11, 2010

UF HEALTH SCIENCE CENTER • 1395 CENTER DRIVE • ROOM DG-22

*A*t the heart of the Institute on Aging is the mission to improve the health and independence of older adults. Join us in celebrating the opening of the Health Promotion Center, a new resource that features more than 7,000 square feet of unique space for research trials, where participants can walk on a 200-foot cushioned indoor track, balance on ballet-style bars set in a mirror-paneled wall, receive health education or whip up easy meals in a demonstration kitchen. It is near an outdoor walking track within the lush and shady Wilmot Gardens, which also will be used in research studies. The facility creates an opportunity for cross-disciplinary, cross-departmental collaborations to investigate the role of physical activity and other interventions in disease prevention and management.
